L-Theanine:

An amino acid commonly found in tea leaves, particularly in green tea (Camellia sinensis). It is known for its relaxing and calming effects, often used to promote relaxation without causing drowsiness. L-Theanine is believed to work by increasing the levels of certain neurotransmitters in the brain, such as GABA and dopamine.

Some potential benefits of L-Theanine include reducing anxiety and stress, improving cognitive function, and promoting better sleep quality. It's often used as a dietary supplement and is sometimes combined with caffeine to provide a balanced alertness without the jitters that caffeine alone might cause.
